

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

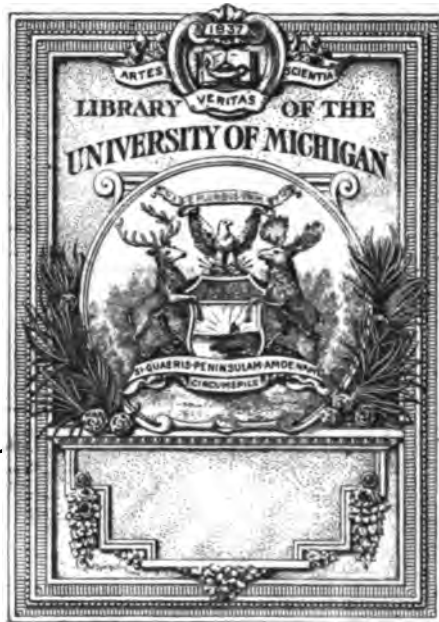

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

Eulalie.

I dwelt alone
In a world of moan,
And my soul was a stagnant tide
Till the fair and gentle Eulalie became my blushing bride —
Till the yellow-haired young Eulalie became my smiling bride.

Ah, less, less bright
The stars of the night
Than the eyes of the radiant girl,
And never a flake
That the vapor can make
With the moon-tints of purple and pearl
Can one with the modest Eulalie's most unregarded curl —
Can compare with the bright-eyed Eulalie's most humble and careless { curl.

Now Doubt — now Pain
Come never again,
For her soul gives me sigh for sigh
And all day long
Shines bright and strong
Astarte within the sky,
While ever to her dear Eulalie upturns her matron eye —
While ever to her young Eulalie upturns her violet eye.

Rest?

THE BACKS OF BOOKS

BY WILLIAM WARNER BISHOP
Superintendent of the Reading Room, Library of Congress

*Address delivered at the Commencement Exercises
Library School, New York Public Library
June 12, 1914*

FEW men who are called upon to address graduating classes in colleges and schools can refrain from the temptation to usurp the functions of the preacher. Here is an opportunity too tempting to be missed. The familiar surroundings so soon to be abandoned, the eager students facing their life-work, the parting of teachers and pupils, combine to set the commencement speaker in the way of moralizing on the situation, so well-worn by manifold predecessors, so painfully familiar to every audience of this sort. Try as I may to avoid preaching to you, I too shall probably be found pointing morals, if not adorning tales, for the occasion inevitably lends itself to the giving of gratuitous advice.

There are, however, some differences between the graduation of a class of prospective librarians and the ordinary school or college commencement. There is the obvious fact, which this class shares with all similar classes in professional schools, that you have been prepared for a specific line of work and are about to enter on the actual practice of your profession. The impending change from theory to practice faces likewise the graduates of schools of law, medicine, theology, and engineering. But your situation differs in at least one respect from theirs. For years they (and you) have been hearing lectures, working in laboratories, studying text-books. From books they have chiefly gathered the theory and training they are about to exercise on a more or less unwilling world. But you are to abandon the formal study of individual books as vehicles of knowledge for the practical handling of books in masses for the benefit of other people. In other words, you are to take what you have learned in a few books and apply it to the marshalling and serving of many books in libraries in aid of readers. What you have gained in theory is to be applied in practice to the very material from which the theory has been evolved, only the application is no longer for your own benefit, but for another's.

Your work therefore will necessarily involve a collection of books as a fundamental basis. Without books there are no libraries or librarians. It is occasionally necessary for some of us to speak up and say this plainly, for the library press and the discussion at conventions teem with so much talk about methods, about ways and means, about library extension, about librarians, that one sometimes wonders what it is all about, and where the books come in. So you will, perhaps, pardon an older librarian for speaking, not about his favorite methods in library work, not about the nobility of our calling, nor even the mission of the librarian, but just a bit about our books and the extent to which we know them. "Die Hauptsache," said a German scholar to me years ago in discussing libraries, "Die Hauptsache ist die Bücher zu besitzen." Absolutely fundamental, but too often neglected, is this cardinal principle of library economy. Without books, many, many books, there is no need for this school, or for this graduating class. The chief defect of our American libraries is, perhaps, the exaltation of method over content. To say this in the very home and citadel of training in method—a library school—may seem strange, even presumptuous; but to say it in the building which houses the noble collections of The New York Public Library is both safe, and, I trust, acceptable.

I wish, then, to speak very briefly on the librarian's knowledge of the books entrusted to his care (particularly in libraries of some size), on his familiarity with his collections. How far may he actually recall even the titles of books, much less know their contents? Is it possible for a truly competent person to remember the names of practically all the authors and titles in a good-sized library? Of course definite answers to these questions are obviously difficult. But I call to mind many a librarian who certainly holds in his head many thousand separate titles, who can with an extraordinary quickness name different editions and publishers of books he has consulted but a few times. I once asked my honored friend Mr. Anderson H. Hopkins, then assistant librarian of the John Crerar Library, how far he was personally familiar with the books in that institution—I knew they had all passed through his hands (for the library was then new), and that he had a very retentive memory, but I was hardly prepared to hear him say that up to the first sixty thousand volumes purchased he could recall practically every title, but that above that number he began to lose track of the accessions. I am convinced that this was no over-statement, for in my own experience I have met not a few librarians whose knowledge of titles equalled his. Such men as Dr. Spofford and Mr. David Hutcheson of the Library of Congress doubtless knew intimately several times that number. And it is the familiar experience of reference librarians that at least appropriate titles, if not always the one best book, seem often to leap into memory to answer a reader's demand. The older choice libraries of about one hundred thousand volumes were probably pretty well held in mind by their directors, particularly when these were men of unusual ability.

It is a curious sort of knowledge, this acquaintance with a library. It is the backs of books that we know; those solemn rows that are seldom disturbed, those less stately ones whose battered appearance and unsteady carriage testify to their popularity. The familiar anecdote of the Kansas legislator who objected to an appropriation for more books for the university library touches peculiarly the librarian. "Mr. Speaker," said he, "I object to spending this money. Why, they've got forty thousand books there at Lawrence now, and I don't believe any one of them professors has read 'em all yet!" Neither have we read ours, and yet we know them, and sometimes know them well.

At least we know them well enough to help other folk to get what they want out of them. In every library in the world persons are constantly seeking material on topics which the librarian has never studied, and which he never will study. Unmoved and undismayed by his ignorance of, let us say, ballistics, or ceramics, or Egyptian tombs, he is somehow able to introduce the reader to the books on these or countless other subjects. And somehow, particularly if the librarian does not pretend to undue knowledge, the reader is often helped materially. He even feels grateful, and occasionally says so in print. (I pass over the times when he doesn't). One knows the backs of his books so well, and somehow has imbibed such a sense of their relative values, that the competent reference librarian becomes one of the most useful folk imaginable.

It should not be forgotten, however, that this knowledge is one of method fully as much as of the books or their appearance. The reader is generally unfamiliar with the order in which the books have been arranged and the means employed to list them. It is the librarian's intimate acquaintance with classification and cataloguing which give him such an advantage over the reader in arriving quickly at desired books or information. You know the order in which your books fall. You know the ins and outs of your own catalogue. You have at hand all manner of indexes and of catalogues of other libraries. So you give a man at once something to keep him occupied, while you hastily look up the things he really wants. And before he has time to thank you, you begin on the same process for half a dozen others. So it goes, day in and day out. Of course the backs of the books become familiar—you live with them. Of course it is easy to run down "aggravating ladies," and others who have frequently changed their names in print. You do it all the time. Of course you know that the British Museum Catalogue enters biographies under the name of the subject. That fact has helped you out of many a tight place. It is this intimate acquaintance with the tools of the trade which makes for speed and accuracy. And precisely those librarians whose memory for the actual volumes on their shelves is most retentive are likely to know best both their tools and the proper method of using them. If we can perform what seem to the uninitiated sleight of hand tricks with cards and books, it is because we know well catalogues, classification, indexes. In fact, a knowledge of the classification in force in the library in which you are working almost takes the place (for practical purposes) of knowledge of the contents of the books themselves.

Let me illustrate this: A friend brought me what appeared to be a genuine manuscript letter of the German poet Schiller. It was addressed to his sister, and all in his handwriting. And yet it looked a trifle suspicious. Despite the appearance of age it had a little the air of a facsimile. But my friend thought it might be an original letter—it had been given to him as a valued possession. Now I am no Schiller scholar. I painfully waded through Wilhelm Tell in college, and once, even more painfully, conducted a class through Die Jungfrau von Orleans. I had never heard of Fritz-Jonas's celebrated edition of Schiller's correspondence. But I did know where the Schiller books were, and that there was among them a set of volumes of letters. In three minutes I went to the place, found the authoritative-looking set, picked out the year and day of the letter, and discovered a footnote to the effect that some one had caused an admirable facsimile of this letter to be lithographed and that efforts were constantly being made to sell it as an original.

Now, this incident will bear analysis. It is typical of much that goes on in our service. The query was not simple. But the means of answering it to the entire satisfaction of the inquirer were really primitive. They consisted merely in a knowledge that there was once a German poet named Schiller, that he had a place in our classification, that his books were shelved in a certain part of our stacks, and that, as a rule, editors arranged correspondence in chronological order. I knew no more about German poetry, or Schiller, or Schiller's letters, when the transaction was over than when it began. But my friend—who is a man of much learning and—I may be pardoned for saying it—one of our foremost scientists, seems firmly convinced that I can find him anything in German literature which he wishes to know. You see on how slight a foundation of real knowledge one can and does perform his daily duties. The backs of books! How they help us! How well do little matters of shape, size, color, location, impress themselves indelibly upon us and aid us to earn our living!

But precisely this facility in helping people to find things has too often a most unwholesome influence on the librarian's attitude toward the world of knowledge. It can not but tend to render him neglectful of that real and sound study which alone gives fibre and substance to his mind. The numbing force of inertia must be reckoned with. We are all busy—too busy. We move along the lines of least resistance. We content ourselves with knowing the backs of our books, with a familiarity with labels and groupings in lieu of ideas. Too soon you are likely to discover that executive work absorbs the greater part of your powers. Too soon the habit of doing pretty well in your work without much reading and study becomes fixed. If you can recall titles easily, can locate desired information quickly, can send a reader to this or that place where his books are to be found, and meantime keep an eye on the needs of half a score of others, you begin unconsciously to think well of yourself and to ignore the fact that man does not live by bread alone.

The wisest man I have ever been privileged to know once said to me: "You can be very useful. You can help a great many people. You can perhaps do a great work. But, if you stay in library work, your mind will be an intellectual rag-bag after ten years."

What is the remedy? Are we to be content with this "bowing acquaintance," as Emerson called it, with the books on our shelves? Are we to be satisfied with bright and parti-colored scraps of information, mental confetti? Are we as librarians, whatever our own special branch of library work, to incur the just reproach of real ignorance of our wares? Is there any way we may escape the consequences of our calling, our undue outward familiarity with masses of books?

It is, of course, impossible, even if it were wise, in this day of large libraries to recommend an effort to know the insides of all the books, or even of the better books, in our collections. They are too many even for the most indefatigable reader, to say nothing of the busy librarian. It is equally unwise to urge you to neglect the knowledge of titles and of classification, of the backs of your books. Cultivate that by all means. It means bread and butter, whatever your particular function in a library. But by all means keep yourselves "sweet," as our fathers used to say, by some intensive work which involves study. I have the greatest respect for the man with a hobby—even if he proves a nuisance at times. Without a hobby life is not worth living. You should have one—a real hobby which becomes vastly more important to you than any mere business can be. I would not prescribe the kind of hobby a librarian should ride. My advice, or any one's else for that matter, would be unavailing. A hobby cometh not with understanding, any more than falling in love. But it is sometimes as happy a possession as a true help-meet, and occasionally as disastrous as an unfortunate marriage. A hobby which will refresh in your hours of weariness, attract when you are lazy, and inspire when you are worn, is precious beyond words.

But a hobby, whether golf, or gardening, or bird-study, or collecting china, or any other like expensive and joyous pastime, is not enough to pull a busy librarian from the slough of inertia as regards books. Indeed, it may tend to keep him there, the more if he wisely takes to some sane supreme interest—out of doors. A line of study which is peculiarly your own will do more for you than you can possibly know at this stage of your careers. A small specialty which you have cultivated to the point where you know with almost complete fullness the literature of the topic is worth vastly more to you than the mere knowledge you acquire in it. The very fact of intensive study of a small topic keeps you in touch with methods and men, and is an admirable corrective to the scattering tendencies of our calling. I know a librarian who started in years ago reading everything he could on our Civil War. He kept it up amid purely executive duties until even specialists in military history now come to him for aid, and the government itself seeks his advice in matters of historical accuracy. He is concerned with the purely business side of a great library, but his extensive knowledge produced by steady reading has kept him in touch with the world of letters in a very vital way. The best man I know in matters economic and statistical knows also (purely as a side issue) more about English poetry, particularly the minor poets, than any professor of English I ever knew. And he is an active librarian, a graduate of a library school, and an "alumnus" of The New York Public Library.

No librarian need despair, if only he sets inflexibly this goal before him, of attaining to productive scholarship. We recall Justin Winsor, who administered in able fashion two great libraries, and yet edited the Narrative and Critical History, to say nothing of other books; Dr. J. K. Hosmer whose array of volumes in English and American History is more than the product of mere industry, and whose Color Guard and Thinking Bayonet pulsate with the great struggle of the sixties; Reuben Gold Thwaites whose monument will be the Jesuit Relations rather than the Wisconsin Historical Society's library; Dr. Poole who will live in his Index long after his other library labors at Yale, Cincinnati and Chicago are forgotten; and last, and greatest of all, Dr. John Shaw Billings, soldier, physician, author, director of great enterprises, yet a librarian who built up by incessant labor the greatest specialized library in the world, and then at an age when most men seek retirement, with unmatched patience, wisdom and zeal wrought The New York Public Library into an organic whole and housed it in this resplendent palace. With these men in mind—and others whom time fails me to mention—who of us shall be content with mere skill in technique, with mere facility of movement among printed things, with mere knowledge of the backs of books?

I said I should probably fall into the habit of the preacher. Full well do I remember that professors of homiletics always urge that the sermon close with an "application." Perhaps some of you are saying—"I am not to go into reference work. I am to be a cataloguer, or to have charge of a branch library, or to aid in library extension. These warnings are not for me." But they are for you, and for every one of us librarians. Whatever our peculiar part in library work, we can not escape the inevitable tendency to treat books as the mere vehicle on which we exercise our skill; we can not fail to gain a certain superficial exterior acquaintance with them. The longer we know and live with the backs of books, the more we shall need the tonic which comes from our own special line of research. Ordinarily, specialists grow narrow, but deep; librarians too often grow broad, but shallow. Begin now, therefore, when you are starting in to practice your profession, to cultivate intensively some one field. Hold to it as the years go by. Dig deeply and wisely into the accumulated store of wisdom which the ages have deposited in your little area. And give the world the ripened fruit you have grown. Thus will you give the lie to Mark Pattison's often misapplied dictum: "The librarian who reads is lost."

PITMAN MEMORIAL TABLET

A BRONZE tablet in honor of Sir Isaac Pitman has been placed in the Public Catalogue Room of The New York Public Library by The Isaac Pitman Shorthand Writers' Association of New York. It was unveiled June 20, 1914.

The tablet bears a profile portrait of Sir Isaac Pitman in low relief, with this inscription:

TO COMMEMORATE
ONE HUNDRETH ANNIVERSARY OF THE BIRTH OF
SIR ISAAC PITMAN
AND IN RECOGNITION OF THE
IMPORTANT COLLECTION OF
SHORTHAND LITERATURE IN

METEOROLOGICAL COLLECTION

THE New York Public Library has received from the Central Park Observatory, a collection of 2,390 volumes, 7,241 pamphlets, 312 circulars, 734 maps, 10 letters, 165 charts and 2 blue prints. The material consists of books and scientific reports on meteorology and terrestrial magnetism.

It includes a large number of books sent to Dr. Daniel Draper during his long and distinguished service as Director of the Central Park Observatory, from 1868 to 1911. Many of these books bear autograph dedicatory inscriptions to Dr. Draper.

With this notable addition, the collection of material on meteorology in The New York Public Library becomes the second in this country, being exceeded in importance only by that in the Library of the United States Weather Bureau in Washington.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibitions of etchings by Haden in the print gallery, room 322, of mezzotints and stipple engravings selected from the collection of the late J. L. Cadwalader (in room 321), and of "Recent Additions to the Print Collection" (Stuart Gallery) have all remained on view. A case of exhibits illustrating the process of etching has been placed in the print room (308).

A CHECKLIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND OFFICIAL GAZETTES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

This list has three main divisions:- (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and * A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in * A.

THE LITERATURE OF THE WAR

IN his last days William Pitt heard the news of the battle of Austerlitz. Shortly afterward his gaze fell upon a map of Europe, and — "Roll up that map," he commanded, "it will not be wanted these ten years."

The saying must have recurred to many persons during the last week of July and the opening weeks of August. France struck down, at Austerlitz, the combined power of Russia and Austria, and, as Pitt predicted, the political geography of Europe was uncertain for a decade. Ninety-nine years have elapsed since the final overthrow of Napoleon, and once more the whole face of Europe is threatened with change. This summer finds at war, at a week's notice, not only the combatants of Austerlitz, but Germany, Great Britain, Belgium, and Servia as well. Smaller nations are endangered, and the whole continent is either aflame or in the shadow of fear. The great world-war that novelists have fancied, soldiers and statesmen predicted, economists questioned, and the peaceful deplored — this mighty convulsion has broken out, to the horror of mankind. An obscure young man, thinking to mend his country's wrongs by murder, has fired the train which leads to the most tremendous physical forces ever pent up on earth.

These forces have been loosed, and on old, historic fields the drama of hate is being played again. Where the soldiers of Frederick and of Marlborough, of Napoleon and of Wellington marched and fought, their descendants are fighting today. There are new alignments and new quarrels; the enemies of the past centuries are friends, the old allies are at war. Men in khaki with high-power rifles have succeeded the soldiers in red and blue who carried flint-locks. The staff-officers who followed their commander on horse-back are now gliding silently over the European roads in automobiles. Above the field of Waterloo aeroplanes whirr and flutter. The combined fleets of Trafalgar would be no match for the smallest ship in the great navies drawing toward battle in the North Sea. Tennyson's dream of the days when the war drum should throb no longer is far from realization. More imminent seems the fulfillment of his other prophecy, when he Heard the heavens fill with shouting, and there rain'd a ghastly dew

From the nations' airy navies grappling in the central blue.

To look at even a few of the hundreds of books which have been written in anticipation of this war makes it seem surprising that its outbreak should ever have been doubted. Certainly, strategists have been planning it in cold-blood, political writers have speculated upon its advantages or disadvantages to their own country, biographers have tried to estimate the temperaments of its leaders, statisticians have calculated the resources of the nations concerned, and romancers have written novels, sometimes merely to amuse, and sometimes to warn and arouse their countrymen against the future conflict.

Its history can be read at present only in the newspapers. Their reports, often contradictory and sometimes false, nevertheless bring the real facts to their readers in much quicker time than could possibly have been done a century ago. In the meantime, books already published may be of the greatest interest and may help to explain the causes and conduct of the struggle.

There are a large number of imaginative accounts of the "wars of the future," "the last great war," or the fictitious invasion of this or that country. One of the slightest of these is perhaps the best known because it was one of the earliest. "The Battle of Dorking,"—first published as an article in Blackwood's in 1871—has been reprinted in pamphlet form. The author was Sir George T. Chesney. He imagined the invasion of England by the Germans who had just conquered France. The object of his sketch was to show the inadequacy of volunteer troops. A much more ambitious work, very readable as a story and based upon a large amount of strategical investigation, is "The Invasion of 1910" by William Le Queux. It was published in 1906; the naval chapters are by H. W. Wilson, an expert on naval subjects, and there is an introductory letter by Lord Roberts.

These concern England and Germany alone. A really remarkable book, in view of the accuracy of some of its predictions, is, "The Great War of 189-." Admiral Colomb was one of the authors, and the others included a number of soldiers and war correspondents. Archibald Forbes was among the latter. The book appeared in 1893, so some of its political calculations are now incorrect, but it represents a war of the principal European nations, beginning almost in the manner of the real conflict of 1914. Another coincidence, in title at any rate, is found in "The Battle of the North Sea in 1914" by "Searchlight." It is a brief work, now two years old. "The Final War," by Louis Tracy, pays more attention to things as a novelist would like them to be. "The World Set Free" by H. G. Wells is, in part, an apt prediction of real events. "Der Dreibund an die Front!" by L. Rautenberg is a recent work, written with the results of the Balkan War in mind. "A Second Franco-German War"—which appeared in 1907—describes an imaginary invasion of Belgium by Germany. The authors are "A Belgian Officer" and "Civis Britannicus." Rudolf Martin is the author of "Berlin—Bagdad. Das deutsche Weltreich im Zeitalter der Luftschiffahrt, 1910-1931." In 1890 appeared "The Last Great Naval War," written by an English naval officer who called himself "A. Nelson Seaforth." "Armageddon, 190—" has been translated from the German. The author is "Seestern," who imagines that a war between the great nations strips both Germany and England of their power, and leaves Russia and the United States to dictate the world's politics. Finally, a terrible vision of modern war is given in Wilhelm Lamszus's "Menschenschlachthaus," translated under the title: "The Human Slaughter House." The little book is said to have aroused the ire of the German Crown Prince, and, for a while, to have cost the author his position as a school-teacher.

"Is War Now Impossible?" is the title, now rather ironical, given to the English translation of I. S. Bloch's "The War of the Future." M. Bloch, a Polish banker, discussed the enormous cost of modern warfare, and doubted the possibility of any more great wars. "Can We Disarm?" by Joseph McCabe is another investigation of this subject, while the writings of Mr. Norman Angell, especially "The Great Illusion," are familiar to everyone interested in international peace. Alfred Noyes's "The Wine Press" is a portrayal in poetry of modern war, by a strong advocate of peace.

The large aspects of war are studied by Col. F. N. Maude in "War and the World's Life." The German cavalry general, Frederick von Bernhardi, in his work "On War of Today," ably states the point of view of a German militarist. "The Principles of War" is by General E. A. Altham. The late Col. G. F. R. Henderson was one of the ablest of recent English military writers, and his book, "The Science of War" contains a collection of his essays on strategy and military training. Many popular misunderstandings about warfare—such as the procedure in declarations of war—may be cleared up by reading J. M. Spaight's "War Rights on Land." W. R. Lawson's "Modern Wars and War Taxes" is a manual of military finance. "Cargoes and Cruisers" by "Civis" describes England's rights at sea. Woolsey, Wheaton, Hannis Taylor, and Hershey are some of the leading authorities on international law. Problems in this department of law are sure to be many in the present struggle. A brief treatise, with reference to the Hague regulations, is T. E. Holland's "Laws of War on Land," while "The Law of Naval Warfare" is by J. A. Hall. The laws regarding contraband may be found in "The Declaration of London" by N. Bentwich. The new phase of warfare is discussed in H. D. Hazeltine's "The Law of the Air." W. M. Fullerton studies international politics from Sadowa to Kirk-Killissé in his "Problems of Power."

To turn to the scene of the outbreak of this summer, Prince Lazarovich-Hrebelianovich has written "The Servian people, their Past Glory and their Destiny;" and Alfred Stead is the editor of a volume called "Servia by the Servians" in which the institutions, resources, and army are fully described. Two other books about the kingdom are: "Servia and the Servians" by Miyatović, and "Through the Lands of the Serb" by Mary E. Dunham.

A. R. Colquhoun deals with the Austro-Hungarian empire in "The Whirlpool of Europe." Two other books on that country are: "Austria of the Austrians" by L. Kellner and other writers, and James Baker's "Austria, her People and their Homelands." H. W. Stead has written "The Hapsburg Monarchy," and Sir Horace Rumbold describes "The Austrian Court in the 19th Century."

H. von Bülow's "Deutschland, Österreich-Ungarn, und die Balkanstaaten" is a publication of this year. A popular work on the Austrian army is "The Austrian Officer at Work and at Play" by Dorothea Gerard. Austria's international relations and internal affairs are studied in Theodor von Sosnosky's "Die Politik im Habsburgerreiche." Francis Gribble is the author of "The Life of the Emperor Francis Joseph."

Next comes Austria's enemy, — Russia. "Modern Russia," by G. I. Aleksinski, describes its internal conditions and politics. "Russia, her strength and weakness" is by Wolf von Schierbrand. Poultney Bigelow has most interestingly described the Russo-German frontier in "The borderland of Czar and Kaiser." Sir D. M. Wallace is the author of a book on "Russia;" Hugo Ganz calls it "The Land of Riddles." A. J. Beveridge wrote on "The Russian Advance;" the writer who calls himself Paul Vassili claims to have looked "Behind the Veil at the Russian Court;" and Maurice Baring gives an Englishman's ideas in his two books, — "The Russian People" and "A Year in Russia." Gen. F. V. Greene has written "Sketches of Army Life in Russia," while Victor Tissot is the author of "Russians and the Germans"

Russia's internal affairs are described in Carl Joubert's "The Fall of Tsardom." "The Case of Russia" by Alfred Rambaud and others studies the Slavic and other questions. Rudolf Martin describes "The Future of Russia" and General A. Elchaninov writes a friendly book about "Tsar Nicholas II."

The mere titles of these books about Germany are full of suggestion: "Germany and the Next War" by Frederick von Bernhardi; "The German Emperor and the Peace of the World" by A. H. Fried; William of Germany" by Stanley Shaw; "The Men around the Kaiser" by F. W. Wile (which includes sketches of the leading soldiers of Germany); "Germany and the German Emperor" by G. H. Perris; "The Brain of an Army, a popular account of the German General Staff" by Spenser Wilkinson; "Pan-Germanism" by R. G. Usher; and "Imperial Germany," by Prince von Bülow.

Although written in 1903 there are still some pertinent chapters in "German Ambitions" by "Vigilans Sed Aequus." Price Collier's "Germany and the Germans" is readable, critical, and mainly favorable. "The Anglo-German Problem" is by Charles Sarolea. The German Emperor is described in "The Kaiser's Speeches," a compilation by Wolf von Schierbrand. The result is not a book pleasing to the Emperor's admirers. A favorable picture of the German Crown Prince is given in "The Kaiser's Heir," — a new book. The Emperor, from a French standpoint is discussed in Victor Bérard's "La France et Guillaume II."

Three books on the German Navy are Rudolf Troeltsch's "Deutschlands Flotte im Entscheidungskampf" (1914), Victor Laverrenz's "Deutschlands Kriegsflotte," — a popular, illustrated volume, and Archibald Hurd's "German Sea-Power" (1913).

The place of France in the discord of Europe is treated in André Tardieu's "France and the Alliances." A curious and very entertaining book, on the siege of Paris in 1870-71, is that by E. B. Washburne, "Recollections of a Minister to France, 1869-1877." Mr. Washburne was the American minister.

A new book by Sir Thomas Barclay, "Thirty Years, Anglo-French Reminiscences," deals, in part with the growth of the entente. The President of the Republic, M. Raymond Poincaré, describes "How France is Governed." Three books about Alsace-Lorraine are: Novicow's "L'Alsace-Lorraine, Obstacle à l'Expansion Allemande," "Quarante ans après" by Jules Claretie, and Hinzelin's "Images D'Alsace-Lorraine."

Spenser Wilkinson, an authority on military affairs, has long worked to arouse England to a sense of her international position. One of the most important of his books is "Britain at Bay." The Hon. George Peel describes, in "The Enemies of England," all her foes, past and present. There are two books entitled "England and Germany." One is by Austin Harrison, and the other, under the editorship of Ludwig Stein, was written by "leaders of public opinion in both empires."

The British Navy, and the naval situation generally, are treated in Jane's "The British Battle Fleet"; Hurd's "Naval Efficiency," "How our Navy is Run," and "The Command of the Sea"; and Keble Chatterton's "Story of the British Navy." "The Naval Battle" by Baudry, is a tactical study. Admiral Mahan, in "Naval Strategy," discusses some recent naval operations. P. A. Hislam's "Admiralty of the Atlantic" is an inquiry into German claims to sea-power as they affect England. Murray F. Sueter has written "The Evolution of the Submarine Boat, Mine, and Torpedo."

Semi-official publications, like the "Taschenbuch der Kriegsflotten," the "Naval Annual," and the "Naval Pocket Book," for 1914, give complete statistics about the navies of the world including, of course, the powers now at war.

This list names only a small part of the books, pamphlets, periodicals and other material, useful and interesting in a study of the war, and available to the reader in The New York Public Library.

The latest and fullest information about the military and naval strength, equipment, and organization of the nations at war is, of course, to be found in the current periodicals devoted to these subjects. The "Internationale Revue über die gesammten Armeen und Flotten" (Dresden) is, as its title indicates, universal in its scope; the periodicals issued on behalf of the military forces of various countries are fullest, of course, for the country of issue, but practically all have departments of current news about the fleets or armies of their friends or enemies.

The Austrian navy is represented by "Mittheilungen aus dem Gebiete des Seewesens" (Pola). For the army the Library has two periodicals: "Mittheilungen über Gegenstände des Artillerie- und Genie-Wesens" (Vienna), and "Streffleur's militärische Zeitschrift" (Vienna), though the latter does not confine its articles to the army of the dual monarchy.

For Germany the periodicals of greatest interest are "Aus dem Archiv der deutschen Seewarte" (Hamburg), "Jahrbücher für die deutsche Armee und Marine" (Berlin), "Kriegstechnische Zeitschrift" (Berlin), "Marine Rundschau" (Berlin), "Militär-Wochenblatt" (Berlin), and "Ueberall" (Berlin), the latter devoted to the navy.

The British arms are represented by the "Army and Navy Gazette" (London), "Army review" (London), "The Fleet" (London), "The Navy" (London), "Royal United Service Institution Journal" (London), and "United States Magazine" (London).

For France the important titles are "Armée et marine" (Paris), "Journal des sciences militaires" (Paris), "La marine française" (Paris), "Moniteur de la flotte" (Paris), "Revue du genie militaire" (Paris), "Revue maritime" (Paris).

For Belgium we have "Revue de la Ligue Maritime Belge" (Anwerp), and for Italy the "Rivista marittima" (Rome).

NEWS OF THE MONTH

JULY WORK

DURING the month of July there were received at the Library 18,005 volumes and 11,183 pamphlets, of which 6,235 volumes and 11,115 pamphlets were credited to the reference department and 11,770 volumes and 68 pamphlets to the circulation department.

Of the reference department receipts 2,163 volumes and 435 pamphlets were purchases, 4,053 volumes and 10,665 pamphlets were gifts, and 19 volumes and 15 pamphlets were exchanges. For the circulation department 11,380 volumes were purchases and 390 volumes and 68 pamphlets were gifts.

The reference department catalogued

2,152 volumes and 2,175 pamphlets; for this work were written 25,991 cards, 3,038 copy slips for the printer, and 258 slips for the duplicating machine. From these 258 slips, 834 cards were manifolded. Cataloguing of 497 volumes and 255 pamphlets was completed by addition to 1,944 cards.

In the printing office 3,231 titles were set, from which 33,981 cards were printed.

The circulation department cataloguing force wrote 2,280 cards for the union catalogue, entered 3,025 volumes in the union catalogue and shelf list, classified 369 volumes. At the branches 5,855 cards were written.

Through the interbranch loan system 8,191 books were asked for and 6,621 were supplied.

A CHECKLIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND OFFICIAL GAZETTES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and * A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in * A.

THE ETCHINGS OF A. H. HAIG

By DR. FRANK WEITENKAMPF
Chief, Art and Prints Divisions

SOME time ago a discriminating friend of the Print Room presented a number of etchings by A. H. Haig, which were placed on exhibition for a time in the Stuart Gallery. Since then, several gifts of that artist's work have come from the same source, including a recent considerable donation by which the Library's collection of Haig's work is now brought to 105 pieces — 99 etchings and 6 original drawings. It is hoped that there may be held in the Library, in the not too distant future, a more representative exhibition of the artist's work, now made possible by this noteworthy gift.

Haig's work has, primarily, the special and double interest of architecture and locality. Himself originally an architect, he brought to the delineation of buildings a professional appreciation of structural qualities, and of a balance of parts that sets decoration into its proper place, without undue emphasis on sculptural details. But, on the other hand, in his pencil studies, he often draws out such details with skill and scrupulous care, studying his subject from various points of view before beginning to etch it. That may be seen in the half-dozen original drawings which the Library possesses, as well as in adequate reproductions.

Haig's name is especially associated with purely architectural subjects, particularly with ecclesiastical architecture, which he has rendered in such a way (to quote the Dean of York's words on the artist's etching of York Minster), as to give "abiding pleasure to those who know and love" the buildings depicted. Thus he has delineated, for example, the cathedrals of Chartres, Amiens, Upsala, Barcelona, Burgos, Toledo, Seville, Rheims, Palermo, Canterbury, Peterborough, and Ulm, as well as Notre Dame of Paris, Westminster Abbey, Kirkstall Abbey, Jedburgh Abbey, and St. Mark's, Venice. As E. A. Armstrong says, in his well illustrated monograph on Haig (London, 1905), he "has constantly exercised his powers upon the noblest examples of architecture in England, France, Italy, and Spain, with frequent excursions into other countries." He has often pictured the solemnity and magnificent grandeur of cathedral interiors, but, to cite Lewis Hind: "Mr. Haig is not always the etcher of dim interiors, where holy statues stand sentinel and worshippers steal on tiptoe across the tessellated pavement; sometimes he darts off to a scene of light and colour and bustle, anxious over the composition rather than the architecture, as witness the Cairo series, while for sunshine — diffused, sparkling — who could desire a better than his 'Moorish Archway'?"

Spain, Portugal, England, Germany, France, Belgium, Egypt, Sweden, all rendered tribute to the sketch-book of this artist-traveler, who shows us picturesque scenes on the Rhine, or "Washerwomen at Chartres," or the "Floating Market" at Stockholm, or "Trafalgar Square," or a "View of the North Transept of Rheims Cathedral," with the busy life of street-vendors going on in the foreground, or "An old wharf" in Venice (a narrow by-way off the beaten track), or a "Swedish River," or bits of street life in Cairo. It is quite evident, even from this short list, that Haig occasionally leaves his "specialty" to present subjects in which architecture is either relegated to the background or is absent altogether.

Always we find in evidence his eye for the picturesque quality, for the romantic aspect. It may be shown in the depiction of such combinations of steep cliffs and towering buildings as Mont St. Michel and the Alcazar at Segovia, or in "compositions" or "fancy pictures" such as "An old Hanse Town" or "The Quiet Hour." And to this appreciation of the characteristics of a given scene which compose well into an effective picture, this seizure upon the elements of picturesqueness (to recur again to that much used term), and to its happy presentation, — to that as well as to the choice of locality and subject — one may well ascribe the wide popularity which this artist's work has enjoyed.

THE JULIAN EDWARDS COLLECTION

THE Library has received a collection of musical literature presented by Mrs. Julian Edwards as a memorial gift to her late husband.

Julian Edwards, the composer, was born at Manchester, England, in 1855, and studied music at the University of Edinburgh. In 1880 he became conductor to the Royal English Opera Company, and composed his first opera, "Victorian," founded on Longfellow's "The Spanish Student." He came to the United States in 1888, and soon entered the field of comic opera. "Jupiter," "Friend Fritz," "Madeleine; or, The Magic Kiss" and

"Brian Boru" were some of his best known achievements in this work. He wrote, during the same period, some operas of a more serious kind, of which "King René's Daughter" is a type. For many years he was recognized as one of America's foremost composers of light opera. He was an American citizen.

The collection, presented by Mrs. Edwards, contains about ninety full scores of operas; one hundred and fifty full scores of cantatas, concertos, oratorios, overtures, suites, etc.; three hundred vocal scores of operas, operettas, cantatas, and oratorios; and three hundred and twenty-five books.

NEWS OF THE MONTH GIFTS

ONE of the important gifts to the Library during July came from the Hon. Theodore Roosevelt. It is a collection of 464 volumes, 303 pamphlets, 19 maps, 5 charts, and 58 plans, all relating to the commerce, customs, industries, sociology, and literature of the Argentine Republic. Many of the works included in this collection are government documents and are of particular interest for the economic history of Argentine provinces and states.

From His Excellency, Dr. Lauro Müller, Brazilian Minister for Foreign Affairs, came 12 volumes in regard to the arbitration of the boundary dispute between Brazil and French Guiana.

M. Eugene Bejot of Paris gave the Library a portfolio containing six of his etchings, as well as the number for October, 1912, of "L'Art et les Artistes." Two wood-blocks and a wood-cut by Helen Hyde were presented by the artist. M. Georges Petit of Paris sent the "Catalogue général des eaux-fortes et gravures originales en couleurs... Paris, Août, 1911;" and the "Supplément... Avril, 1914."

The Library has received an important addition to the Spencer Collection of modern book-bindings. It consists of 19 books, mainly by modern French authors, and bound by the foremost French binders.

Interesting miscellaneous gifts were received from individuals as follows: From Mrs. Benjamin S. Church, of New York, a continuation of her previous gift of engineering reports; from Dr. Alexander Duane, of New York, a collection of 34 volumes and 35 pamphlets; from Mr. Arthur Falkenau, of New York, a collection of 66 volumes, mainly engineering magazines; from Mr. Louis A. Freedman, of New York, 49 volumes and 1 pamphlet, consisting of novels by French authors; from Mr. Asher Golden, of New York, 33 volumes and 2 pamphlets, for the most part works on aeronautics; from Mr. Douglas C. McMurtrie, of New York, 21 volumes and 93 pamphlets, consisting of reports of schools and institutions for the blind, reports of the International Chemical Congress, etc.; from Mr. A. Ratner, of Mt. Vernon, N. Y., the works of Jehoash, in Hebrew, in seven volumes; from Mr. William B. Tuthill, of New York, the "New York Annual Register, 1833" by Edwin Williams; and from Mr. W. B. Wait, Jr., of New York, a collection of text-books, novels, histories, etc., consisting of 109 volumes and 10 pamphlets.

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and *A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in *A.

Founded as the official organ of the Socialist Labor Party. Following the party schism of July 10, 1899, rival weekly papers were published, each for a time called the People, and having the same numbering. The faction headed by Daniel De Leon was in 1900 recognized by the courts of New York as legally entitled to the party name, and its organ entitled to the name The People; upon the establishment of the Daily People in 1900 the older paper took the name of the Weekly People.

Following the schism in the Socialist Labor Party the Slobodin-Hillquit faction published this rival paper, keeping the old numbering. In 1900 the courts of New York recognized the other faction, headed by Daniel De Leon, as entitled to the party name, and its organ entitled to the name The People. The Slobodin-Hillquit faction allied itself in 1900 with the Social Democratic Party and in 1901 became the Socialist Party.

The cases recorded are: Sir John Borthwike (1540), Thomas Forret and others (1538), Robert Lambe and others in Perth (1543), George Wischart (1545), Adam Wallace (1550), Walter Mille (1558).

The account of the trial and execution of Wishart was written by John Knox and published in London in 1547 or 1548. It is therefore the earliest printed work of the Scottish reformer. But one copy only of the tract is known to exist. It was reprinted by Fox in 1564 in the work above mentioned, and again by Knox himself in his History of the Reformation (H'orks, ed. by Laing, v. 1, p. 149-171) because Fox's work was costly 'and rare to be had.'

LESLIE, SIR JOHN, MATHEMATICIAN

Sir John Leslie was appointed professor of mathematics in Edinburgh University in 1805. His election was opposed by the presbytery of Edinburgh, which brought a charge of unorthodoxy against him. A fierce war of pamphlets resulted, the titles of the greater part of which are here noted.

Brewster, Sir David. An examination of the letter addressed to Principal Hill, on the case of Mr. Leslie, in a letter to (Andrew Thomson) its anonymous author. With remarks on Mr. Stewart's postscript, and Mr. Playfair's pamphlet. By a calm observer (Sir David Brewster). Edinburgh: Mundell & Son, 1806. 1 p.l., 86 p. 8°.

READING AND THE WAR

LIBRARIANS, like all other folk who have to do with books, are watching the effects of the war upon the reading habit. It may be said without hesitation that one obvious effect is already noticeable. From a number of points in this Library, where members of the staff are in direct contact with the public, there comes ample testimony of a fairly widespread interest in the recent histories of the countries involved, in books of European travels, in international law bearing upon treaties, upon the duties of neutrals, and upon contraband goods. Authors, journalists and students are continually using these books. In the requests at the main Reading Room, there has been a noticeable emphasis upon military and strategical as opposed to political topics.

The demand for books of a semi-prophetic nature has, of course, been great. One Branch Library receives thirty requests in a single day for General von Bernhardi's "Germany and the Next War." It would be forcing the facts, however, to pretend that the war has caused any very marked change in the habit of reading novels, and caused the readers of fiction suddenly to seek more "serious" books. It is too early to say whether any slight diminutions which may be noted in the percentage of requests for fiction are due to the war, or to the opening of the schools and colleges, or to any one of the numerous obscure causes which influence reading. Undoubtedly the extraordinary events in Europe have led some persons to read, perhaps for the first time, something other than a newspaper or a novel. In this way the percentage of loans of books of non-fiction has been increased.

On the other hand, so many of the books which have been in demand since the outbreak of the war come under the head of fiction, that there has probably been an increase in reading of this class. The philosophical and sociological novels of H. G. Wells, the didactic romances of the Baroness von Suttner, and their like, have to be classified in libraries as fiction. That they are, however, quite as "serious" as many of the volumes of non-fiction, and that they are frequently more valuable than some of the superficial books of travel and current history cannot be doubted. The lending of one of them counts, in library statistics, with the lending of a light novel, and illustrates the unsatisfactory side of statistics.

The war has already affected the reading habits of thousands of persons who never enter a library. Newspapers have suddenly assumed a place which they have seldom or never occupied. Many people who read them entirely for amusement, or as a matter of routine, now find them necessary factors of daily life. The periodical press seems to be receiving double its usual amount of attention. A war, even of two small and unimportant nations, has always excited the interest of educated people throughout the world. This war, which is not only dramatic and startling, but which may influence the lives of most of the inhabitants of the globe, can leave no writer or publicist unmoved. Consequently, for perhaps the first time in history, nearly all the important writers of England and the Continent, and many of the Americans, have expressed themselves in print, upon one subject, during the short space of ten weeks. Philosophers, theologians, teachers, historians, poets, novelists, and dramatists, of all the countries, have discussed the political aspects of the war in newspapers, magazines and books. This, in addition to the narrative of events, has made ephemeral literature profoundly interesting. It could not fail to affect the reading of multitudes.

The causes of the war lie deep-rooted in history—its discussion, consequently pre-supposed information or research. Deeper still lie the moral questions involved,—the ethical position of the combatants. No nation, today, dares openly to avow that the war it wages is aggressive,—each seeks to show that it only takes up arms to defend its territory and its honor. It tries to prove, therefore, through the power of the printing press, the justice of its cause. Here again is an appeal to the reading public.

The usual causes of a war—racial, geographical, or commercial—are all involved in this conflict. But so—and this is a rather novel thing—are opposing schools of thought, of the most fundamental questions of right and wrong. Whether the principles of honor which guide a private individual are in all cases equally applicable to a state, to what extent it is true that force is and ever must be the final arbiter of morals,—these are the questions freely argued in print by men of learning. There used to be engraved upon cannon the words: Ultima Ratio Regum. The phrase is now challenged and defended. Guns have been, in the evil past, "the last argument of kings." To their power, it seems, still lies the final appeal today. But are they to be the court of last resort in the future? Both sides of this great question have been presented for readers during the last two months,—and never more pertinently.

Librarians will expect to see an interest in historical research stimulated by the war. The flood of books and other printed matter which will increase in volume as the war proceeds, and swell enormously when it comes to end, cannot fail to affect the use of libraries. Learned institutions, with their civilizing influences, seem now in eclipse. Their turn will come again, and it may be that they will offer some help in finding a substitute for the present idiotic and ghastly methods of settling international differences.

NEW PUBLICATIONS

THE Library has published, during the summer, "A Selected List of Books on Mountaineering," compiled by Le Roy Jeffers.

Another publication was "Books for Summer Reading," a brief, annotated list reprinted from the June number of the Branch Library News.

"As Interesting as a Novel" is the title of another small list of books, reprinted from the July number of the News, while "Stories of the Sea" has been reprinted from the August number.

"The Literature of the War," the article which appeared in the August number of the Bulletin of the New York Public Library, has been issued as a separate leaflet.

AN IMPORTANT RUSSIAN PERIODICAL

THE Slavonic Division of The New York Public Library has secured a complete set of the Kolokol (the Bell), a Russian periodical which appeared in London and Geneva from 1857 to 1869. Its editor and publisher was the famous publicist Alexander Gertzen (known in English and German literature as Herzen). Although forbidden by the censorship it had a large circulation among the intellectual classes of Russia, and was read by the Emperors Nicholas I and Alexander II. Its influence upon the latter is supposed to have hastened his action in emancipating the serfs. An important feature of the set is that it contains all the French and Russian supplements up to 1869.

READING LIST ON NEW YORK

NEW York City and the Development of Trade" is the title of a reading list published by the Library in connection with the Commercial Tercentenary Celebration. It contains references to books and to articles in periodicals. Many of the entries are annotated. The compiler was Elsie Gansevoort Seymour.

Visitors to the building numbered 170,914.

EXHIBITIONS

THE exhibition of etchings by Haden, the selection of prints from the Cadwalader Collection, and the recent additions to the print collection have remained on view in Room 321, Room 322, and the Stuart Gallery, respectively.

The case of instruments illustrating the making of an etching is displayed in Room 308.

In honor of the meeting of the United Typothetae in New York City, the Library has held an exhibition of books illustrative of early printing and of the history of printing. The books were displayed in the Exhibition Room during the first weeks of October.

In connection with the Commercial Tercentenary Celebration the Library put on display, in the Exhibition Room, on October 24, a large number of manuscripts, books, and pictures. Early Dutch and English books dealing with the settlement of Manhattan and the establishment of a trading post, early accounts of important events in the history of New York, autograph manuscripts or signatures of many of the Dutch and English governors, formed part of the exhibition. The original Dongan and Montgomery charters were shown, as well as various other items of interest, dating for the most part before 1800. A number of early views of New York City were also displayed.

LIST OF WORKS IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY RELATING TO OXY-ACETYLENE WELDING

COMPILED BY THE DIVISION OF TECHNOLOGY

The arrangement is chronological by date of publication. For references to acetylene other than in its relation to welding the reader should consult the various periodicals related to the industry, also the indexes of the Journal of the "Society of Chemical Industry" (VOA). For patent abstracts, reports of the Deutscher Acetylen Verein, and for various German decrees, see the files of "Carbid und Acetylen" (VGA), and of the "Zeitschrift für Calcium Carbid Fabrikation" (VGA). Tho patents are not as a rule cited, indexes and text may be consulted in the Patents room, Number 121.

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and *A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in *A.

The work embraces the earliest known representation, in full heraldic blazonry, of nearly seven hundred coats of arms, of the ancient nobility and old landed families of Scotland.

The arms have been reproduced in facsimile of the originals from heraldic manuscripts dating from the year 1369, in the reign of David the Second, to that of 1678, in the reign of Charles the Second.

The earliest manuscript made use of in the work is the Gelre manuscript, of the year 1369, preserved in the Bibliothèque Royale at Brussels. The Scottish arms in this manuscript will be found very faithfully represented. The next most ancient manuscript wherein Scottish arms are found is the Armorial of Gilles de Berry, king of arms, in the year 1460, preserved in the Bibliothèque Nationale at Paris. All the other known manuscripts lent for the purpose of making this collection complete, by the earl of Crawford and Balcarres, the earl of Kinnoull, Macleod of Macleod and C. M. Kerr, and those in the Heralds' College, London, the British Museum, the Advocates' Library, the Lyon Office, Edinburgh, and the Library of the University of Edinburgh, have been examined, and the coats selected from them faithfully reproduced.

PART II

THE article on the literature of the war, printed in the August number of the Bulletin, contained references, of course, only to material published before the beginning of the war. In the time which has elapsed since then, the extraordinary events which are taking place all over the world have progressed from the stage where they formed the subject merely of newspaper articles, have been described and discussed in the magazines, and for several weeks have furnished topics for publications in book form. The great tide of printed matter, destined to result from these momentous days, has begun to flow.

Much, perhaps most, of what can now be chronicled is only of passing importance. It is, however, useful and interesting for current reading. Some of it will assume historical importance, and so a few of the titles may be mentioned.

Japan and Turkey are the most important countries which have entered the war since its beginning. For information about the army and navy of Japan consult J. C. Balet's "Military Japan" and a book of which Alfred Stead was the editor, called "Japan by the Japanese." About Turkey, the reader may enjoy Marmaduke Pickthall's "With the Turk in War Time," B. G. Baker's "The Passing of the Turkish Empire in Europe," or Vahan Cardashian's "The Ottoman Empire of the Twentieth Century."

Two books about Belgium, both written before the war began, are "The Belgians at Home" by Clive Holland, and "Belgium, her Kings, Kingdom, and People" by J. de C. MacDonnell. "The German Enigma" by Georges Bourdon, was also written before the war. So was the third of Maurice Baring's works on Russia,—"The Main-springs of Russia." Another book, first published several years ago, but of renewed importance today, is Houston Stewart Chamberlain's celebrated work, "The Foundations of the Nineteenth Century." F. H. Lynch is the author of "Through Europe on the Eve of War." The nations engaged are described in "The European War; the Powers" by R. Stroppa-Quaglia, and in Charles Morris's "The Nations of Europe, the Causes and Issues of the Great War."

Some of the armies have been the subject of a series of little books which claim to speak from inside knowledge. Thus E. C. Vivian writes on "The British Army from Within"; "Ex-Trooper" on "The French Army from Within"; W. B. Stevani on "The Russian Army from Within"; and "A British Officer Who Has Served in It" on "The German Army from Within." E. T. Henderson writes a book called "Germany's Fighting Machine"; "Ubique" is the author of "How Armies Fight"; and A. S. Hurd writes "The Fleets at War."

J. M. Kennedy is the author of "How the War Began" and "The Campaign Round Liège." C. I. Barnard's "Paris War Days" is very readable. "The Great War" by F. H. Simonds, is a reprint of the editorial articles which have attracted favorable attention in the New York Evening Sun. It covers the period from the murder of the Archduke to the fall of Antwerp. "In the Firing Line" is by A. St. John Adcock. The two "War Manuals" issued by "The World's Work" are well illustrated. Professor A. B. Hart has written "The War in Europe," and James A. Kilpatrick has compiled an entertaining book called "Atkins at War, as Told in his own Letters."

For the controversial literature, the German side offers "The Truth about Germany" by the American Institute of Berlin; Professor Münsterberg's "The War and America"; and Edmund von Mach's "What Germany Wants." On the other side are: Douglas Sladen's "The Real Truth about Germany"; J. A. Cramb's "Germany and England"; E. J. Dillon's "A Scrap of Paper"; John C. Powys's "The War and Culture"; Cloudesley Brereton's "Who is Responsible?"; F. W. Whitridge's "One American's Opinion of the War"; and Arnold Bennett's "Liberty." The Oxford Faculty of Modern History have compiled "Why We are at War," and the statement of the Belgian Commissioners is in "The Case of the Belgians." Emil Reich's "Germany's Madness" (published in England as "Germany's Swelled Head") first appeared a number of years ago.

Diplomatic correspondence of the various countries has been published by the New York Times under the title: "Why England, Germany, Russia and Belgium Went to War." These and other papers, such as the speeches of the German Chancellor, and of the English and French Premiers, are given in convenient pamphlet form in the series of "Official Documents Bearing upon the European War" now being published by the American Association for International Conciliation. Mary F. Billington's "The Red Cross in War" is of recent publication. "The Secrets of the German War Office" by "Armgaard Karl Graves" is an interesting book, sometimes very inaccurate, and of highly doubtful authenticity throughout. It had best be read as fiction. E. V. Lucas's "Swollen Headed William" is a parody of "Struwwelpeter." It has comic illustrations, and is interesting mainly as an example of the ephemerae of war. Finally, two books of English poems have for their titles: "Songs and Sonnets for England in War Time" and "Poems of the Great War."

The article on "The Literature of the War," from the August Bulletin, has been reprinted as a separate folder, with the addition of the titles given here.

A more complete list of the new books on the war is given in catalogue form, on pages 1257-60.

MILLET EXHIBITION

THE centenary of the birth of Jean François Millet, on Oct. 4th, 1814, has given the Prints Division of the New York Public Library an opportunity for another one of its minor exhibitions. A number of cases in the Stuart Gallery are filled with the etchings of Millet, the wood-cuts executed by his two brothers after his designs, the four large lithographs of North American Indian Life by Charles Bodmer, in which the latter's friend and neighbor, Millet, drew the figures, and the usual prints and books concerned with the artist. The material is practically all part of the S. P. Avery Collection.

It always gives a deep, serious pleasure to come back to these plates of Millet, these visions of the French peasant. Simple and large in style, they are rendered in a classic spirit. These "Gleaners," "Diggers," the "Shepherdess," or that unforgettable "Peasant with a wheelbarrow,"—they are not merely illustrations of French rural life, but typical figures of the gleaner, the digger, the sower, and the significance which their actions have for us is summarized with a noteworthy force of expression. The feeling that lies behind Millet's work is contagious and compelling. The apparent simplicity of expression becomes subtle if we regard the harmonious flow of line in a composition such as "The Gleaners." Technique, always a means with Millet and not an end, is always intelligently fitted to his medium.

This is also true in his wood-cuts, — bold in execution, done in few lines, with kinship to the work of the men of the 16th century. His art responds to no call of fad or fashion. Its interest is perennial because it is based on human ideas and sympathies that are part of our heritage and of our future hopes.

est known autograph signature, dated 1801. There are first editions of many of his works, and a collection of Irving portraits. The collection is especially appropriate for exhibition in The New York Public Library, as Washington Irving was first President of the Astor Library, one of the constituent parts of the present institution.

MANUSCRIPT DIVISION

DURING October the library secured by purchase a collection of papers of Gen. Robert Swartwout, an officer in the war of 1812, and the principal promoter of the scheme for reclaiming the Hackensack and Bergen meadows, now the terminals and freight yards of numerous railroads opposite the city of New York. The collection contains a good deal on the reclamation schemes, both in manuscript and in print. There are also letters written from Chicago and Ft. McHenry, and from Troy, Rochester, West Point and other places in New York; and correspondence of Gen. John Armstrong, Morgan Lewis, Peter B. Porter, Col. J. Chambers, Henry Clay, Gen. J. Rutsen Van Rensselaer, Samuel L. Southard, Erastus Root, Nicholas Biddle, David B. Ogden and Philip Hone. The last named was Swartwout's brother-in-law.

The library also purchased a manuscript of memoranda (7 p.), drawn up by Robert Troup in November, 1826, in regard to the origin of Washington's Farewell Address and Alexander Hamilton's part therein. Troup was a close personal friend of Hamilton. Among other purchases may be mentioned a military diary and account book of Capt. Henry True, during the period, 1696-1719, on forty-five leaves. Capt. True was for many years town clerk, selectman, etc., of Salisbury, Mass.

WASHINGTON IRVING EXHIBITION

AN especially interesting collection of manuscripts and other memorabilia of Washington Irving has been placed on exhibition in room 112. It is lent to the Library through the courtesy of the owner, Isaac N. Seligman, Esq. It includes the original manuscript of "Bracebridge Hall," manuscript note-books and unpublished journals, — among which are note-books for the Knickerbocker "History" — several collections of autograph letters, and what is probably Irving's earli-

NEW PUBLICATIONS

THE Library has published, in a separate pamphlet, the "List of Works in the Library Relating to Oxy-Acetylene Welding" which was printed in the October number of the Bulletin.

On October 28th, the first number of the Municipal Reference Library Notes was published. As its name implies, it is devoted to furnishing information about the Municipal Reference Branch of the Library.

"Stories of Romance and Imagination" — a brief list of books — has been reprinted from the October number of the Branch Library News.

A CHECKLIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND OFFICIAL GAZETTES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and *A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in *A.

For earlier files see entry under Odessa, Russia. In Hebrew. The paper was published weekly until the end of 1882; semi-weekly from 1883 to June, 1886; and daily from July, 1886. Ceased publication Jan. 30, 1904.

Edited and published by Alexander Zederbaum and Aaron Isaac Goldenblum. The poet Judah Loeb Gordon was a regular contributor during the years 1880-82, assistant editor during the early part of 1883, and joint editor from December, 1885 to the end of August, 1888. The connection of J. L. Gordon with this prominent newspaper constitutes a memorable epoch in the history of Hebrew journalism; whilst the unpleasant relations of the two editors gave rise to a considerable controversial literature.

- After J. L. Gordon had officially become joint editor, A. I. Goldenblum, whose connection with the paper seems to have been rather nominal, remained joint publisher for less than a year, then his name disappeared entirely until Sept. 2(14), 1893, when he became acting editor, after Zederbaum's death, until the end of that year. J. L. Gordon was succeeded by Judah Loeb Kantor, who remained a non-official associate editor until the end of the winter of 1890. From 1894 to 1904, Leon Rabinovitch, formerly assistant editor, was editor and publisher. Other sub-editors were: Abraham Shalom Friedberg (1883-86) and Moses ha-Cohen Proser of the department of domestic news (1871-95). Reuben Brainin was connected with the office of the paper during the winter of 1888-89.

Abraham Elijah Harkavy's fourteen literary supplements, published during the years 1878-79, bear the title "Meassef niddachim" and contain historical material from inedited manuscripts in the Imperial Public Library of St. Petersburg, announcements of important new books, and bibliographical notes.

In Hebrew. Edited and published by Perez Smolensky. German title: Beobachter.

After no. 8 the editor decided to have two fortnightly, appearing alternately, instead of one weekly. Ha-Mabbit, as a fortnightly, is to be devoted to matters of general interest, whilst a new paper, named Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael (German title: Israel. Beobachter) is to be devoted solely to matters Jewish. As a matter of form, in compliance with certain requirements of the Austrian press law, A. Wagner is given as "verantwortlicher Redacteur" for Ha-Mabbit and A. Rudoll for Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael. In all there were published seventeen numbers of Ha-Mabbit and nine numbers of Ha-Mabbit le-Yisrael.

Newes from Scotland, declaring the damnable life of Doctor Fian a notable sorcerer, who was burned at Edenbrough, in Januarie last 1591; which doctor was register to the Deuill, that sundrie times preached at North Barricke Kirke to a number of notorious Witches; with the true examinations of the said doctor and Witches, as they uttered them in the presence of the Scottish king: discovering how they pretended to bewitch and drown his majestie in the sea, comming from Denmarke; with such other wonderfull matters, as the like hath not bin heard at anie time. Published according to the Scottish coppie. [At London:] Printed for William Wright. (In: Ancient criminal trials in Scotland... Edinburgh, 1833. 4°. v. 1, p. 213-223.) CP

The authorship of this blood-curdling tract has been doubtfully attributed to Rev. James Carmichael, minister of Haddington (1568-1628). Notwithstanding the statement that this edition was "published according to the Scottish coppie" it is more probable that Wright's was the first edition.

TWO MANUSCRIPTS

IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

I. THE MANUSCRIPT OF POE'S "EULALIE"

THE original holograph manuscript of Edgar Allan Poe's "Eulalie," of which a facsimile is presented herewith, was discovered recently by the Keeper of Manuscripts in a leatherette-bound copy-book. On a front page the book bears the original autographs of President James K. Polk and some members of his cabinet. Upon other leaves are mounted, by means of wafers, cut autographs of a number of presidents, vice-presidents and statesmen of the United States, as well as of a few literary personages. It is safe to say that this copy-book was used as an autograph album in the period from 1845 to 1850. The Poe manuscript was folded and laid in loose. There are no evidences of its ever having been fastened or mounted. It is written on the light bluish tinted writing paper so common to the period in which it was produced. The salutation and signature of Poe, pasted on the lower right hand corner of the poem, are written on a strip of white paper of the time, similar to paper which Poe used for letters of which the library has some originals. The copy-book is a part of the Robert L. Stuart collection, presented in 1892.

Poe's "Eulalie" was printed for the first time in The American Review: A Whig Journal of Politics, Literature, Art and Science, for July, 1845 (vol. 2, p. 79), with the title "EULALIE. — A SONG. | BY EDGAR A. POE." The text as first printed varies from our manuscript in the heading, in punctuation and in the last lines, which read:

While all day long
Shines, bright and strong,
Astarté within the sky,
And ever to her dear Eulalie upturns her matron eye—
And ever to her young Eulalie upturns her violet eye.

These variations are interesting only as another instance of Poe's practice of freely altering his writings.

"Eulalie" may be classed as one of his twelve best poems, in which his temperamental regard for the beautiful in woman finds peculiar expression. The year of 1845, moreover, was the year in which the pendulum of Poe's career alternated between new literary conquests on the one hand and poverty, illness and moroseness on the other. On January 29th, "The Raven" had appeared in the Evening Mirror, with a favorable word from Nathaniel P. Willis, its editor. Poe's manuscripts, so often pigeonholed by the editors of journals in the past, were now in demand. The end of November, of this year, his collected poems dedicated to Elizabeth Barrett (afterwards Mrs. Browning), were published at New York by Wiley and Putnam, under the title: The Raven and other Poems, and "Eulalie" was among them. This paper-covered duodecimo of less than a hundred pages, which now sells at several hundred dollars, was published at thirty-one cents, and was not destined to yield much of a revenue for the alleviation of Poe's hardships. It is true that Poe declared in his preface with singular abnegation: "I think nothing in this volume of much value to the public, or very creditable to myself. . . . With me poetry has been not a purpose, but a passion; and the passions should be held in reverence; they must not — they cannot at will be excited with an eye to the paltry compensations, or the more paltry commendations, of mankind." Here he also tells us that "these trifles" were collected by him "with a view to their redemption from the many improvements to which they have been subjected while going at random 'the rounds of the press,'" and added: "If what I have written is to circulate at all, I am naturally anxious that it should circulate as I wrote it." The text of "Eulalie" in this collection agrees with our manuscript in the last lines, thus showing these changes had been made some time between the period of first publication in the American Review, in July, and republication in the collected edition issued in November.

Poe's youthful wife, Virginia Clemm, was already suffering from that physical disability which ended in her death from consumption in January, 1847, at the little cottage in Fordham, whither they had removed less than a year before. She was his "fair and gentle Eulalie" — that "blushing bride" whose radiant eyes had cheered him and stimulated his ambitions in the midst of disappointments without number. On the back of the manuscript of "Eulalie" may yet be read in faint lines a couplet in his handwriting, thus:

Deep in earth my love is lying
And I must weep alone.

SKETCH FROM THACKERAY'S NOTEBOOK

Professor Woodberry in his biography has said of Poe's poetical doctrine: "Of the minor articles of his creed it is necessary to recall only those which assert that a poem should be brief; should aim at a single artistic effect, but not to the exclusion of a secondary suggested meaning; and should be touched, if possible, by a certain quaintness, grotesqueness, or peculiarity of rhythm or meter, to give it tone. . . . The diversity of criticism upon Poe's verse is largely due to the assumption that it can be measured intelligently by any other than his own standard. The poet strives, Poe thought, to bring about in others the state felt in himself; and in his own case that was one of brooding reverie, a sort of emotional possession, full of presentiment, expectancy, and invisible suggestion, the mood that is the habitat of superstition; vagueness was the very hue in which he painted." These analyses by Professor Woodberry may well be remembered when reading Poe's "Eulalie."

II. THACKERAY'S NOTEBOOK FOR "HENRY ESMOND"

THIS interesting manuscript of notes and drawings made by William Makepeace Thackeray for his historical novel, The History of Henry Esmond, Esq., and for lectures, was presented to the Library recently by Mrs. Henry Draper, as an addition to the John Shaw Billings Memorial, founded by her. It was secured directly from Thackeray's daughter, Lady Ritchie, through an American agent. In Lady Ritchie's "Centenary Biographical Edition" of her father's works, she refers to it as containing "a few topographical notes" (Henry Esmond. London, 1911, p. xxx). But in addition, there are historical notes and memoranda on four pages, notes and drawings on two pages, five full-page drawings of Lord North, Charles James Fox, the Duke of Cumberland, Dean Atterbury, and other sketches. The accompanying facsimiles show the first page of his notes and a sketch which Lady Ritchie says is "probably Dean Atterbury."

The first edition of The History of Henry Esmond, Esq. was published at London, in 1852, by Smith, Elder and Company, in three volumes, with half-titles which read: "Esmond: A Story of Queen Anne's Reign. By W. M. Thackeray." The original manuscript of the novel is preserved in the library of Trinity College, Cambridge, in two large quarto volumes which were presented to the college in 1888 by Sir Leslie Stephen, the author's son-in-law. That manuscript, which served as printer's copy, is partly in Thackeray's hand, and partly written by his daughter, now Lady Ritchie, and by Mr. Eyre Crowe, his "factotum and amanuensis."

One of the earliest critiques written about "Henry Esmond" was penned by George Brimley, then librarian of Trinity College, for the Spectator of November 6, 1852; since reprinted in Brimley's Essays, Cambridge, 1858; and later, with an introduction by Richard Henry Stoddard, New York, 1861. He characterizes the work as follows:

"The book has the great charm of reality. The framework is, as we have said, historical: men with well-known names, political, literary, military, pass and repass; their sayings and doings are interwoven with the sayings and doings of the fictitious characters; and all read like a genuine memoir of the time. The rock ahead of historical novelists is the danger of reproducing too much of their raw material; making the art visible by which they construct their image of a by-gone time; painting its manners and the outside of its life with the sense of contrast with which men of the present naturally view them, or looking at its parties and its politics in the light of modern questions: the rock ahead of Mr. Thackeray, in particular, was the temptation merely to dramatize his lectures: but he has triumphed over these difficulties, and Queen Anne's Colonel writes his life, — and a very interesting life it is, — just as such a Queen Anne's Colonel might be supposed to have written it."

Half a century has sustained that earlier estimate. In his De Libris (1908), Austin Dobson says that this novel "is still unrivaled as the typical example of that class of historical fiction, which, dealing indiscriminately with characters real and feigned, develops them both with equal familiarity, treating them each from within, and investing them impartially with a common atmosphere of illusion. No modern novel has done this in the same way, nor with the same good fortune, as Esmond; and there is nothing more to be said on this score."

If Thackeray succeeded in keeping his literary workshop from view in his novel, the revelation of some of the bases of his process, as discovered in his little notebook, cannot fail to have an interest to the literary historian.

OTHER RECENT ADDITIONS

THE November Bulletin mentioned a military diary and account book of Captain Henry True, of Salisbury, Mass. The Library has since purchased another account book of Captain True, 1712-1725, with accounts by Samuel True relating to the first church of Salisbury, 1774-1803.

Of peculiar interest for the early period of the American Revolution is an orderly book kept principally by Captain William Mason and Captain William Charnock, of Colonel (afterwards General) William Moultrie's command, from June 20, 1775 — December 8, 1776. It contains data in regard to the building of Fort Sullivan (now Fort Moultrie) in Charleston harbor, South Carolina, and the attack thereon by the British fleet on June 28, 1776. To the same period there also belongs a "Journal of the Canadian Campaign, 1775," kept by Henry Brockholst Livingston, from August 25 to December 19, of that year. The later period of the war is represented by two orderly books kept by Lieutenant Libbeus Loomis, adjutant of the First Connecticut Regiment of the Line, in General Heath's command, mostly in The Highlands of the Hudson, from February 5 — April 9, and May 30 — July 14, 1782.

The War of 1812 is represented among the recent additions by an orderly book of General Green Clay, of the First Brigade of Kentucky Militia detached. This has entries from March 19 – August 25, 1813, written mostly in the hand of his aide, Joseph H. Hawkins, at Lexington, Cincinnati, Camp George Town, Dayton, Piqua, St. Marys, Fort Winchester, Fort Meigs, etc. It includes an original "plan of march" and an autographic roll of General Clay's officers, dated at Camp Meigs, September 16, 1813, agreeing to continue with the army to Malden.

The Texas revolution and Mexican War are represented by a most important purchase of more than three-fourths of the correspondence of Commodore David Conner, U. S. N. It consists of more than 2,600 pieces, including secret diplomatic papers, official instructions and correspondence from the Navy Department, secret intelligence, communications from the commanders of the ships in his squadron, and drafts of his own correspondence.

The Library has also acquired a small number of official reports and letters to Rear Admiral L. M. Goldsborough, U. S. N., commander of the European squadron in 1866-1867, during the rebellion of Crete against Turkey, showing the part played by our navy in succoring refugees.

New York history has been enriched by a volume of "General Observations on the Brantingham Tract," in Lewis County, accompanied by a large map of the tract as surveyed into lots in 1806 by P. Benjamin Wright, with colored drawings of the Black River Falls, the Canal Lock, and Hell Gate on Black River. But the most important accession of interest to students of the history of New York is the original manuscript report of February, 1811, of the first commissioners appointed by the legislature of New York to explore the route from the Hudson River to Lake Ontario and Lake Erie for an inland navigation. It was presented to the senate on March 2, 1811. This primary document in the history of the Erie Canal bears the signatures of Gouverneur Morris, Stephen Van Rensselaer, W. North, De Witt Clinton, Thomas Eddy, Peter B. Porter and Simeon De Witt. The Library has secured a portion of the papers of John Tayler, acting governor of New York for some months in 1817. Tayler had a public career of half a century, during which period he held many important posts. The papers acquired extend from 1787-1849. The Honorable Charles S. Fairchild, Secretary of the Treasury in the cabinet of President Cleveland, has given to the Library a number of financial papers and account books of the Third Great Western or Cherry Valley Turnpike and of the Utica and Syracuse Railroad.

New acquisitions of British naval and military documents include a contemporary manuscript volume giving a record of the grants of the British Parliament for the army and navy, 1689-1698; abstracts of accounts of public revenue, taxes and loans, 1688-1697, with an estimate of the cost of the war; a general and particular state of the army in 1697; grants in 1698; list of the navy royal of England, 1688-1697, with interesting particulars. There is also the original letter copy-book of Captain A. H. Hoskins, R. N., while in command of H.M.S. "Sultan," from December 3, 1873, to September 25, 1874.

He is represented in the Avery Collection by nearly 800 pieces. The Prints Division has drawn on this Collection to present an interesting review of the work of him whom some one has called the "Michael Angelo of ducks."

Peter Moran, an American etcher prominent in the revival of etching in this country toward the end of the past century, died on November 13. An exhibit of his etchings has been arranged in the Stuart Gallery.

A CHECKLIST OF NEWSPAPERS AND OFFICIAL GAZETTES IN THE NEW YORK PUBLIC LIBRARY

COMPILED BY DANIEL C. HASKELL

This list has three main divisions: (1) an alphabetical arrangement by cities in which the papers are published; (2) an alphabetical index to the titles or names of the papers; (3) a chronological index showing the years covered by the files here indexed.

Under the name of each country in its alphabetical place is found a list of references to the cities of that country represented. References for the British Empire are made from England, Scotland, Ireland, and the various commonwealths and colonies. For the United States references are made from the names of the individual states.

Under the individual cities the arrangement of titles is alphabetical, not by the first word, but by the first important word, such words as daily, weekly, morning, evening, and the name of the town, when a part of the title, being disregarded.

When the two shelfmarks Reserve and *A are given for a single entry it may be generally assumed that files up to and including 1800 are in Reserve, later files in *A.

The first edition of this work was suppressed immediately on publication in consequence of some libellous remarks in it on Lord Hermand. The libellous matter was contained on p. 120 of v. 2, and the resetting is noticeable in the so-called 2. ed. from line 6 of p. 119 to line 10 of p. 122. In copies of the "2. ed." in the original boards the pasting in of the new title-page can be observed.

The work was written when Lockhart was in his twenty-fifth year.

Some extracts with the title, "Clerical portraits, from Peter's letters to his kinsfolk," are printed in the Edinburgh magazine and literary miscellany, v. 5, p. 113-120, Edinburgh, 1819.

The author of this version, a lady of Perth, requested one of the ministers of that town to examine and correct the ms. Hoping to dissuade her from the publication, he returned it after keeping it some time, saying that he was incapable of improving it. This, however, she understood to mean that it was so faultless as to need no emendation; and she accordingly sent it to Edinburg to be printed; but as it did not gain the approbation of the readers, the impression was bought up by a friend, and a copy could not afterwards be procured.

The first edition of the Irish Bible contained in one volume.

This edition was printed at the expense of R. Boyle, and others, in roman type, chiefly for the Gaelic-speaking Highlanders in Scotland. Robert Kirk was responsible for the transliteration from the Irish character. The printing was undertaken at the solicitation of James Kirkwood. The book never found favour in the Highland parishes of Scotland. The people were as ignorant of the Roman type as of the Irish character.
